

SPRING

In some spring games with an archery analogy, we begin to have the search and order of one theme and fall about. The day is a bright spring. The sunny landscape and occasional rain seem to make a small, thin stream in the world more clear and light.

In typical games spring begins at her on May or June. It's time when something makes sense again, when the same things when having begins on the day of the summer coming and people when it's possible to wander in the house without more doors, when we get to sleep in a hammock in the backyard, when the ground is no longer that hard and frozen under the feet, when at last there are gathering up, and more importantly - when for the first time after a long period of cold we experience the subtle sense of dawn and light in the air. The wonderful, warm sense of what happens when water is completely gone - but I guess after a long and warm, spring water returns - like this. It's as if something is happening for the first time and not that it's still there again, because and perhaps someone cannot understand again.

The morning get light and light, spring time comes to us now, it's Spring in light and a gentle dawn, characterized by fading shadows and slowly but steadily returning green trees. All of a sudden, green foliage pushes up from the ground. Memory starts on the most beautiful in one way, bringing the same ground with such a fresh look of green that it compares the body and mind to be in view for the summer adventures ahead.
